Depositor Identity Register

Depositor identity

This supplement adds fictional scenario data for the local AML demonstration. Depositor names, internal identity references and roles below are invented test fixtures mapped to the existing transaction IDs. They are not identities recovered from the source database or verified government credentials. The earlier packet records the original data gaps; this supplement adds sample responses for testing.

Authorization and Customer Explanation

Casa Brisa Kitchen Inc. | C002 | ACC-C002-01 | ALR-39CA1056B369

Relationship between depositors and account owner

Fictional authorization record DEMO-AUTH-C002: the scenario assumes that the account owner appoints all fourteen individuals in the register as temporary catering collection contractors. Their sample role is to collect event proceeds and deposit those proceeds into the company operating account. They are neither owners nor account holders, which is consistent with the source non-customer depositor indicators.

Sample reporting relationship: contractors report to the restaurant owner, Elena Marisol Quintanilla-Hayes. Scope: event collections in Illinois, Indiana and Texas during the flagged period. The names, appointment and authority are invented scenario details, not customer attestations.

Customer explanation

FICTIONAL CUSTOMER RESPONSE - NOT SIGNED OR RECEIVED FROM THE CUSTOMER

The sample explanation is that the restaurant undertook a temporary multi-state catering program. Local collection contractors deposited cash receipts at branches near the events. The main operating account was then used to pay food and beverage suppliers promptly. The customer profile had not been updated to reflect the temporary activity outside California.

The narrative explains why third parties and out-of-state branches might appear, but it does not establish that the transactions were legitimate. The existing California-only profile and rapid movement of funds still require assessment. No assertion is made that the bank verified the catering program.

Scenario Record Cross-Reference

Each depositor row maps to one existing flagged deposit. Transaction IDs, branch states and deposit amounts retain their source values. The fictional authorization and explanation apply to all listed deposits; they do not amend the underlying transaction data.

Business Purpose and Payment Schedule

Casa Brisa Kitchen Inc. | C002 | ACC-C002-01 | ALR-39CA1056B369

Business purpose

Recorded business purpose: operate one full-service restaurant with dine-in, takeout and catering. Added fictional scenario purpose: collect temporary catering receipts and settle related food and beverage purchases. The schedule below maps each actual flagged outflow to a sample procurement purpose; these are illustrative allocations, not supplier invoices or proof of delivery.

How This Supplement Relates to the First Packet

The first packet supplies the source ledger, business-location profile, beneficiary relationships and same-account allocation timeline. This supplement supplies sample identity details, a sample contractor relationship, a fictional customer explanation and illustrative purchase purposes. Together they cover the document categories for a demonstration; coverage does not mean authenticity, verification or alert clearance.

Provenance

Source facts: current local case API, alert ALR-39CA1056B369, customer profile and triggering transactions. Added scenario assumptions: every depositor name, DEMO-ID reference, contractor appointment, catering explanation and purchase allocation. Prepared by the demonstration system, not by the customer or bank.
